

El Dorado School

Assessment Plan

Goes Back 25 Years

YOU WILL FIND in the Prescott News column, on another page of today's paper, an account of the speech which Superintendent Stubblefield of the El Dorado public schools made this week before the Rotary club in Prescott.

Mr. Stubblefield talked on the work of community leaders and the Union county equalization board to reform tax assessments so the public schools could function with financial safety. I should add to Mr. Stubblefield's remarks the modest comment that the assessment reform program of which he speaks has been going on for 25 years at least.

You will find in the editorial and news columns of the El Dorado Daily News a running story of the fight back in the 1920s to put property on the tax books and establish a fairly even system of valuations. Those who come into Arkansas from other states find it hard to believe we still hold on to our antiquated system of voluntary assessments. Other states send men out to check property reports and uncover the true facts — so that all the people shall be treated alike.

But Arkansas's voluntary assessment system is futile and unfair, for it penalizes the property owner who declares himself openly and honestly. Therefore the schools lose revenue in the end. And if you have known any other tax system you reject the Arkansas plan, no matter how many of the home people uphold it.

For in this ancient and unfair assessing system lies much of the financial trouble of our public schools. You and I know that there is enough wealth and income in southwest Arkansas to maintain the public schools, if the obligation remained at the local level and we had to meet it.

But the support program fails at the local level, the burden is thrown back on the state — then the state fails . . . and chaos results.

That's my story. And I know, for I'm the guy who wrote many of those editorial pieces that helped start off that equalization reform in El Dorado about which Superintendent Stubblefield spoke in Prescott this week.

Charges Fly in Fight for Child Custody

Little Rock, March 24 — (AP) — Leonard Farmer, 34, an admitted former Communist from Connecticut, accused his ex-wife of misconduct with her one-time attorney in a child custody hearing here yesterday.

Farmer, who said his family was wealthy, also accused Mrs. Estelle Farmer, 32, of Communist activity equal to that which he admitted in his own behalf.

Mrs. Farmer is attempting to set aside a divorce decree granted Farmer here in 1948 and to gain custody of their two children, eight and nine years old, which was granted to Farmer. She said the divorce was obtained by fraud.

She testified Wednesday he forced her to join the Communist party after they were married, an assertion Farmer denied.

During yesterday's testimony, Farmer calmly shifted his attack to municipal Judge C. T. Driscoll of Brantford, Ct., former attorney for Mrs. Farmer.

Driscoll also served as chairman of the draft board which had supervision over Farmer in World War Two. He appeared as a witness for Mrs. Farmer in the court hearing and has been with her in the courtroom during most of the hearing.

Looking squarely at Driscoll, Farmer declared that in 1945 "I came home unexpectedly one night and met Connie Driscoll leaving my house in a hole of a hurry with his clothes in terrible disarray. x x x" It is my belief that Connie Driscoll has been in the company of my wife since 1942 more than I have. While I was away from home at war after 1943 he was there with her, an as far as I know he has been with her during the time I have been in Arkansas. "If any one thing is to be

Calendar Vt. True Year

A calendar year is 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, 46 seconds long, but the true year, the time of a full revolution of the earth with reference to the stars, is 20 minutes 24 seconds longer.

But it looks like milady will wear her winter wraps and galoshes in the Easter parade in some parts of the mid west and northeast.

Generally clear skies were forecast for tomorrow, but the cold weather which hit midwest areas today was pushing eastward and was expected to cover the eastern states by Sunday morning.

It will be a white Easter for many midwest areas. Fresh falls of snow, measuring from two to six inches, hit parts of Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan.

The snow storm centered in eastern lower Michigan today. Winds up to 50 miles an hour were reported around the storm center. There were flurries in nearby states and showers and thunderstorms to the east from the Appalachians northeastward to New

Draft Board Seeks Whereabouts of Odis Harris

J. M. Duffie, chairman, states Local Board No. 29 is very anxious to obtain any information as to the present whereabouts of Odis Harris a Negro, born December 25, 1926. Last known address, Columbus, Arkansas.

That the said registrant failed to report for physical examination. That is very important that he contact his Local Board at once.

If anyone knows the present address or whereabouts of Odis Harris, the Local Board will appreciate such information being furnished to it immediately.

Big Brass Has to Consult Congress

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, March 24 — (AP) — The Pentagon's big brass have to take a lot of time out from their actual defense work to talk about it to congress.

It's a necessary task since congress, which makes the laws to back defense, wants to know first hand from the brass what their plans are and why.

Sometimes congress may overdo the demands it makes on the time of the Pentagon chiefs. But that's one of those things.

Secretary of Defense Marshall has had to make the trip to at least 10 times since

But Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant secretary, is the one who has spent far and away the most time on the hill. But her case is extraordianry.

Before she ever was able to take office she was accused of being a Communist. That charged had to be examined. It turned out to be ridiculous.

But she had to face the lawmakers six times to brand the charge a lie, confront her accuser and clear her name.

Then soon after becoming assistant secretary, with the job of working out a manpower program, she had to start dashing up to the capitol. She made 13 trips, plus the six on the communism charge.

There's no record of the times she was called up for informal discussions with members of congress.

These other very important people have had to make their visit, too: General Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff; General J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff of the army; Admiral Forrest Sherman, chief of naval operations; General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, chief of the air force; and assistant secretaries in the department of defense.

But when any of these people face the lawmakers they're not alone. They have to bring staffs with them to fill them in on some detail or answer a specific question of a member of congress.

Even before the V.I.P.'s to the hill, a lot of time is used in getting them ready for their appearance.

They have staffs to brief them on what they'll say and even anticipate questions which may be asked so they'll have ready answers.

And a great deal of work goes into preparing the kind of legislation which the Pentagon asks congress to pass.

There's a staff to draw up the bills, which means, since events change from day to day, that these bills, which means since events and re-drafted.

And all this is only one part of the picture, since it deals exclusively with congress and the Pentagon people.

The same is true, more or less, for the other heads of government departments and agencies, particularly Secretary of State Dean Acheson who has to duck away from foreign affairs many times to answer lawmakers' questions or explain a shift in policy.

Awards Given in County-Wide Quail Contest

At a dinner meeting today noon at Hotel Barlow 18 Hempstead County youths received awards for their work in a countywide quail conservation program under sponsorship of the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission.

The winner of the county wide contest was Burrell Smittle of Patmos who received $25. Second place went to James Long of McCaskill who received $20 and third place was taken by Richard Lynn Hunt of Hope along with a $15 award.

All contestants received $5 in cash and merchandise. They included James Robert Fuller, Travis England, Lyndon Pate, Eugene Burrow, Garwin Bobo, Clinton Campbell, John Marshall Hurd, Thomas Moses, all of near Hope, Oliver Rosenbaum of Fulton, Donald Avery of Prescott, Elvin Mc Dougald, McCaskill, Rt. 1, J. L. Ward, Prescott, Rt. 5, George Hulsey of Washington, Rt. 1, Robert Smittle of Patmos, James Huett of Patmos.

An atomic reactor produces heat. The AEC announced last night it has authorized negotiation of a contract with a General Electric company division "for the further development of a nuclear reactor for aircraft."

The atomic energy commission said the new contract will be negotiated with the aircraft gas turbines division of General Electric, at Cincinnati. A gas turbine engine uses superheated gases to whir a turbine which turns the aircraft's propeller. It was assumed, therefore, that ways would be sought to use heat from a nuclear reactor to heat air or other gas for a turbine engine.

The youths were commended for their work and prizes were awarded by Dorsey McRae, Jr., chairman of the contest committee.

Game Warden Earl J. Barham said 280 had signed up for the 1951 program. All money and award merchandise was donated by the merchants and businesses of Hope.

Foreign Nations Have Too Much Other Trouble to Think About the U. S. Crime Probe

By DeWITT MCKEZIE

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

It will strike a lot of folks as more than hazing strange that very little interest has been shown aboard in the sensations developed by the U.S. Senate crimes investigating committee.

Next, Assistant Defense Secretary Anna Rosenberg, talking about manpower problems with the Senate small business committee, said without elaboration that in April the defense department expects for the first time to meet General Douglas MacArthur's manpower calls.

Yesterday the army announced it is cutting its April draft call from 80,000 to 40,000. The army said enlistments in January and February were 40,000 in place of an expected 20,000 and that casualties in Korea were 16,000 less than had been anticipated.

And all this is only one part of the picture, since it deals exclusively with congress and the Pentagon people.

The same is true, more or less, for the other heads of government departments and agencies, particularly Secretary of State Dean Acheson who has to duck away from foreign affairs many times to answer lawmakers' questions or explain a shift in policy.

The result is that foreigners as a whole divide Americans up into three classes: Millionaires, gangsters and cowboys.

I have spent much time abroad during the past generation and have encountered some amazing notions about America and her people. For instance when I first came to England during World War One there was a widespread belief that wild Indians still roved the plains about Chicago. I mentioned this to an English friend yesterday and asked if any such idea still exists.

"It certainly does," he replied. "I have encountered it recently myself."

Obviously much of the misinformation is due to lack of personal observation in America. The foreigner who has traveled in the United States finds his strange ideas dissipated and he gets a new perspective. And that cuts both ways, for many Americans have false notions about foreign lands which could be cured by travel.

These false notions often breed dislikes which snowball and grow into ill feelings between nations.

I don't know off-hand how many countries I've visited during the last forty years, but there are two which I could name. One is Japan, where I have been twice, and the other is China.

Tokyo, March 24 — (AP) — General MacArthur today offered to discuss peace with the Red command in Korea and ordered United Nations troops to cross parallel 38 if necessary.

MacArthur issued his offer and ordered as advancing Allied forces stamp out almost the last organized Red resistance south of the border to Red Korea.

A Good Friday parachute drop added in routing the Reds from their last sizable area in South Korea.

Sunday School Lesson

The great events of the New Testament are familiar to readers of the Four Gospels and the Book of the Acts. But I doubt whether there is any equal knowledge or understanding of the history of the Jewish people as it is recorded in the Old Testament, and especially of the backgrounds of that of Israel in successive stages.

It must always be remembered that in early times the tribes of Israel were surrounded by, or in contact with, idolatrous and often hostile tribes. And in later times the small country of Palestine with its relatively small number of people, was situated between great and powerful empires of that ancient world.

The history of the Jewish people is interwoven with that of those surrounding empires with accounts of dangers, wars, invasions, destruction and tragedies to individuals and to the whole society of which they formed a part.

It has occurred to me I might further the wise and intelligent use of the Bible by submitting my own brief outline of the eras and major events recorded in the Old Testament.

The Bible begins, as we all know with the story of Creation. A devout and great teacher, under whom I studied years ago, called this a "poem of Creation." Much futile controversy might well have been avoided if the beautiful story of the successive stages of creation and the bringing of order out of formlessness and chaos had been thus read. Too many readers have been guilty of hard literalism and efforts to bring it into conflict, or agreement with "science."

What is distinctive about the Genesis story is its assertion of a Creator: "In the beginning God the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews says: "Every house is built by some man; but He that built all things is God." That built is firm and logical truth. The ancient Hebrew writers, aware of their power to create things, like the family

DOROTHY DIX

Contrary Husband

What does it take to make a real home? You can't make one just with stones and bricks, for there are places filled with period furniture and priceless ornaments that are no more homes than is a shop or a jail or a museum. There are shabby cottages that men and women remember as home through a lifetime.

You can't make a home just by good housekeeping, for there are houses which every meal is a feast where every floor is swept and scrubbed and garnished, where every chair is in its place and yet from which husbands and children flee as if from a purgatory.

It takes, first love. The love of a husband and wife, the love of parents and children, the love of brothers and sisters. Love is the fire on the hearthstone, the light in the window that makes a home warm and bright. Without it everything is cold and bleak and as inhospitable as the tomb. There is nothing at which you can warm yourself. The married couples who have only a lukewarm liking for each other and whose children are unwanted cannot make a home. They only build a house.

To make a home takes teamwork. No man can make a home on matter how domestic he is; no matter how much money he pours into it; no matter how many gadgets he puts in the bathroom; no matter how much he cuts the grass and trains the vines; no matter how amiable and sweet-tempered he is; if he is married to a high-tempered and nagging wife, or to a woman who resents housework as drudgery or to one who spends her time on causes or clubs.

Nor can any woman make a home though she cooks like a chef, pinches pinches and smiles like a Cheshire cat, if she is married to a grouch, or a tightwad, or a philander, or one who regards a home as the service station to go to for repairs. The only real homes you ever see are those made by a man and woman working together, shoulder to shoulder, and putting their backs and their hearts into the job.

Tranquillity Essential

It takes peace to make a home.

It must be a place of serenity and quiet, a snug harbor in which the members of a family may drop anchor after the storms of the day. Its tranquillity must be so impersonal that the worries of life beat up against it, but break away from its door.

The house that is filled with bickering and strife and quarreling, where the husband and wife are at each other's throats and the children fight like cats and dogs,
